High School 'Who's Who' Pays Tribute to Another Graduate

Nana Cooper, who resides with Mrs. Howard Thomas, the former Nina Cooper, member of the 1930 graduating class of Circleville high school, is the eighth outstanding senior chosen to appear in the "Who's Who" column.

Nana's personality is one in a million. Her cooperation and willingness to help have been her two most valuable assets. As a member of the office staff she has been very capable. Scholastically, she ranks fourth in the senior class. Her high ranking alone shows her interest in all her subjects. She is a member of the girls' glee club and Epsilon Mu Sigma, an honorary English society. Her interest in dramatics resulted in her being cast in the Senior class play, "Wings of the Morning." Last year Nana was business manager of "The Boomer," the junior class play.

Those who appear in the Who's Who column were chosen by a faculty committee of five. The order of their appearance is by lot.

457 MINERS AND COAL OPERATORS TO TALK PEACE

WILSONVILLE, Ill., May 22 — (UP) — Officials of Superior Coal company and the 457 strikers who are "sitting down" in the dingy caverns of Mine No. 4 waited for each other today to make the first move for peace.

Leaders of both sides said they were willing to "talk things over," neither made a move to do so. Fred F. Pfaler, company president, waited in his offices in Wilsonville for a reply to his offer to confer with strike leaders "if they come up here." The strikers offered no reply, except that they would "continue the fight as long as we are able."

Strains of harmonicas, slap of playing cards, and the clang of pitched horseshoes rang through the corridors and mine-rooms of the coal pit into the early hours. The men settled down to sleep in blankets their wives and relatives sent them on the company elevator. They rose to breakfast from the well-stocked larder in the car-barn which they have converted into a kitchen. Apparently they were happy and comfortable.

FIRST TEACHER IS HONORED AT COMMENCEMENT

Miss Edith Spangler, of Tilton, the teacher who started the Washington township 1937 graduating class in the first grade of school 12 years ago, was honored Friday evening at commencement exercises.

Miss Spangler was the first grade teacher when the class of 1937 started in school with 23 members in the class. When the group reached the eighth grade it had been reduced to 17. When it graduated there were six members.

Dr. James Thomas, of Columbus, was the speaker at the graduation, providing the students and the crowd of 250 in the auditorium with many suggestions for success. An accorded band from Columbus provided music.

All teachers of the school were hired for another year, Friday, when the board had its regular meeting. Wendell Boyer is the school's efficient superintendent.

TWO FRENCHMEN SEEK AVIATION MARK TO TOKYO

PARIS, May 22 — (UP) — Marcel Doret and Francois Micheletti took off today on an airplane flight to Tokyo. They hope to better the record of two Japanese flyers who made the Tokyo-Paris flight in 92 hours 18 minutes and have just reached Tokyo on their return flight.

Doret and Micheletti intend to fly via Athens, Karachi, India and Rangoon, Burma, keeping in the air as much as possible day and night.

WAGE AND HOUR PACT IN STEEL INDUSTRY LOOMS

PITTSBURGH, May 22 — (UP) — A contract governing the wages, hours and working conditions of 27,000 employees may be signed Monday by Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation and John L. Lewis' steel workers organizing committee, it was indicated today.

Representatives of the company and the union, originally scheduled to resume conferences today, announced that they would meet again Monday morning and it was believed probable the agreement would be signed at that time.

WINDOWS OF U.S. EMBASSY BROKEN IN PLANE RAIDS

MADRID, May 22 — (UP) — Forty-five persons were killed and 70 wounded, according to unofficial estimates, in a nationalist artillery bombardment of the capital today. This followed a series of bombings yesterday in which about 20 were killed and 60 wounded, including women and children.

Several windows of the American embassy building were smashed during a 4½ hour bombardment today.

Shells fell particularly, as usual, in the Gran Via, Madrid's Broadway, and in streets adjoining.

Others fell in the so-called neutral zone in which the American and other embassies are situated.

Some shells fell also in the Barrio De Salamanca residential zone, which had not hitherto been hit.

About 120 shells, most of them of 6-inch calibre, fell in a wide area over the city.

As this dispatch is written more shells have begun to fall near the telephone company building, the newspaper headquarters, and government batteries are retreating.

Two shells hit the Central hotel, which houses the foreign corps. Both crashed down the elevator shaft and exploded in the empty cellar.

LONDON WOMAN SUFFERS BROKEN BACK IN WRECK

Mrs. Luke Bailey, of near London, suffered a broken vertebra Friday afternoon when she was thrown against the top of an automobile. The accident took place near Darby on the London-Circleville pike.

Mrs. Bailey was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, for treatment.

The accident happened when the car struck an abrupt rise in the road. Mrs. Bailey was returning from the funeral of a relative in West Virginia. She was treated at the office of Dr. Alfred Deyo, Derby, before being removed to the hospital.

RUSSIANS START AIR BASE WORK AT NORTH POLE

Scientists to Establish Station 12 Miles From Top of World

FOUR MEN TO REMAIN

Moscow-San Francisco Line to Be Established

MOSCOW, May 22 — (UP) — A group of Russian scientists began building a meteorological station 12½ miles from the North Pole today after a historic flight to the top of the world.

Four of the men who made the flight will remain at the pole for a year, studying weather conditions and establishing a base that it is hoped will be an adjunct of an eventual Moscow-San Francisco airplane service.

They have with them a little Arctic dog, whose barking will warn them of the approach of predatory polar bears—with which they intend to augment their diet of concentrated foods.

To Place Three Flags

The men intend to make a trip over the ice to the North Pole, spend 24 hours there and plant three flags where Peary planted the American flag in 1909 — one of red silk bearing Josef Stalin's portrait, one with the crest of the Soviet Union, and the blue flag of the Russian Arctic administration.

Food and fuel for 18 months, a collapsible house and scientific equipment is to be dropped by parachute or actually landed on the ice floor where the airplane crew is drifting.

They are at the scene where 28 years ago, on April 6, 1909, Admiral Robert E. Peary, his American Negro aide, Matt Henson and four Eskimos planted the American flag.

Peary and his men stayed 30 hours. The Russians intend to stay for good, for it is proposed that this North Pole weather station shall be permanent, fixed on the ice under which Peary found 9,000 feet of polar sea.

The historic landing was made yesterday morning by members of an expedition of 42 men who are based on Rudof island, in the Arctic ocean north of the European continent.

'Hero at Controls'

For the polar landing the four-motored, Russian designed plane USSR-N-170 was selected. It took off at 5 a. m. yesterday with Mikhail Vodopianov, whose Arctic flights won him the title "hero of the Soviet Union" at the controls, and Prof. Otto Schmidt, Russia's leading Arctic expert, in command.

At 11:10 a. m. the plane circled wide over the pole and at 11:35 a. m. it was landed safely on the ice 20 kilometers (12½ miles) from the pole.

News of the landing was flashed at once from the plane's radio set to Moscow. During the message, however, the plane's transmitter (Continued from Page Two)

Twin Found in Abdominal Cavity of Oregon Infant

PORTLAND, Ore., May 22 — (UP) — A baby girl, 13 months old, will undergo an operation at Doernbecher children's hospital next week for removal of a twin that has developed in her abdominal cavity.

It is one of the rarest medical phenomena, medical books contain only brief references to the subject, which is called teratoma.

X-rays showed almost a complete skeleton within the baby's abdomen. The girl was not identified. She was brought here from Douglas county for treatment.

Dr. Richard B. Dillehunt, head of the University of Oregon medical school, said the growth is caused by a cellular division occurring shortly after conception. Occasionally, he said, there have been records of where one twin

ECKENER TO TESTIFY IN HINDENBURG BLAST

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 22 — (UP) — Dr. Hugo Eckener, foremost authority on dirigibles, testifies today at the inquiry into the destruction of the Hindenburg.

Dr. Eckener, in Germany when the huge ship burned with a loss of 35 lives, heads the German delegation investigating the disaster. He indicated his desire to appear as a witness before the U. S. department of commerce inquiry at last night's session.

COLUMBUS MAY WIN RATE CUT

Light Company Discussing New Schedules With City Officials

COLUMBUS, May 22 — Although company officials said they had "nothing definite" to announce, it is reported that the Columbus, Railway, Power and Light Co. is contemplating a cut in its local light rate schedules.

It was learned the question of a reduction has been discussed for several months by utility officials and councilmen.

Cuts in electric rates have been made in Cleveland as recently as May 1, and since last August reductions have been made to consumers in Dayton, Cincinnati, Youngstown, Sidney, Gallipolis, Hillsboro, Piqua, Wilmington and Xenia.

Columbus consumers now are paying a 5-cent per kilowatt hour maximum charge under a five-year contract embodied in an ordinance approved by the voters in the Nov. 6, 1934, election. Previously the maximum charge was 6-cents a kilowatt hour.

The residential schedule, approved by voters and which will be in effect until Nov. 15, 1939, unless there is an agreement by both parties.

JUSTICES MEET TO TALK VITAL NEW DEAL LAW

Only Two Days Remaining For Tribunal to Tell its Findings

GATHER AGAIN MONDAY

Van Devanter Retirement Causes Situation

WASHINGTON, May 22 — (UP) — The supreme court met today to complete its decisions on two phases of the New Deal's Social Security act and other legislation.

Probability that opinions in the Social Security cases will be read Monday was generally accepted by court followers. Only two decision days remain — Monday and a week from Tuesday — and in the past only a few minor cases have been left for the final day of the session.

It was regarded as possible that the court would fail to make a final determination of the issue at the present term because of the probably close division on the Social Security question.

Continuation Possible

There is nothing which compels the tribunal to decide a case at the same term at which it is heard, but that practice has generally been followed in the past. The court could hold the case over or order it re-argued in the fall.

The situation created by the impending retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter might work toward such a move in the Social Security cases. This would prove particularly true if the decision in (Continued on Page Two)

DUKE ANGERED AT BOYCOTT OF HIS MARRIAGE

MONTS, France, May 22 — (UP) — The Duke of Windsor, seriously worried over a virtual British government boycott of his wedding, has resorted to knitting to soothe his jangling nerves. It was understood today. As the result, it was said, Mrs. Wallis Warfield has a new sweater which he knitted for her in wool of the new "Wally blue" shade. It was finished last night and presented to her this morning.

Since the government's ostracism campaign, it was said, the duke has become more and more nervous, and slept so badly that he knitted and purled on the sweater assiduously until late at night.

It was reported that Mrs. Warfield was kept busy consoling the duke. Events of the last two days have filled him with bitterness against the government, it was reported, and have been a severe blow to his pride.

Harold Strous presented the class. The Rev. L. C. McCandlish gave the invocation and benediction and Supt. George McDowell spoke briefly.

The crowd at the exercises was estimated at 325.

YOUTHS CAUGHT TRYING TO FLEE FAIRFIELD JAIL

LANCASTER, May 22 — An attempt of four Columbus youths to escape from the Fairfield county jail was frustrated by Sheriff William Belhorn.

The youths, bound to the grand jury under $1,000 bond each on charges of breaking and entering stores in Baltimore and Lithopolis, and involved in other nearby counties, tried to chisel a section of the 18-inch prison wall away sufficiently to permit escape.

They had penetrated the wall about a foot using pieces of steel from a prison cot. The sheriff believed they had been working on the wall several days and had concealed their work behind a pile of window sashes.

Those implicated in the attempted escape were James, 32, Allen, 18, and Henry Morris, 27, and Orval Woods, 20.

RAMSEY FREED; CONLEY TO FACE CHARGE OF U. S.

Charles Ramsey, 28, Circleville, was released from the county jail Saturday after serving out a sentence of 30 days and a fine of $200 and costs imposed last Nov. 12 for petit larceny.

Howard Conley, 33, of Salt Lake, Ky., given the same fine and sentence, is being held for federal authorities under an indictment returned in the eastern district of Kentucky charging violation of liquor laws. He will be returned to Lexington, Monday.

The men were indicted on robbery charges, but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge.

GOVERNOR SIGNS 205 NEW BILLS AND VETOS 31

Davey Refuses Approval or Law to Amend Ohio Sales Tax Act

SUNDY CLAIMS REDUCED Activities Of Constables Limited to Townships

COLUMBUS, May 22—(UP)—Governor Davey today completed the task of acting on bills passed during the regular session of the Ohio legislature.

Of the measures sent to the governor, he signed 205, vetoed 31, and by item veto reduced three appropriation bills.

The governor last night vetoed a bill that would have amended the retail sales tax law. Sponsors of the bill had contended it would plug up "leaks" in the present law and yield about $3,000,000 in additional revenue annually. The governor said the bill was "badly drawn" and difficult to understand.

Friday Deadline
The governor used his veto power liberally in the rush to act on remaining bills before the deadline last midnight.

He reduced the sundry claims bill by $405,000 to $204,882. The largest item vetoed was one for $294,000 to repay boards of education in 19 cities for deficits in operating special classes for crippled, blind and handicapped children.

A bill providing $1,208,000 for additions and betterments in state institutions was reduced $87,750. An item of $60,250 for Ohio State university was vetoed.

A bill was approved to curb activities of roving constables from justice of the peace courts and limiting their jurisdiction to townships in which the justice of the peace was elected. Their jurisdiction had been county-wide.

Gov. Davey vetoed a bill establishing retirement systems for municipal and county employees, and another to regulate speed of motor boats in state park reservations.

Among other bills vetoed were: Permitting township trustees to renew, extend, or enter into new lighting contracts.

Restricting the rights of local communities to create village schools districts, exempted from the county district.

Establishing soil conservation districts and setting up a state soil conservation committee.

Ashville Rural Carriers Go Many Miles Yearly

Martin Cromley Begins Work On Monday As Substitute

COL. J. M. Johnson (above), Assistant Secretary of Commerce, has announced that permits will be refused to pilots seeking to fly in the transatlantic race from New York to Paris, scheduled to mark the opening of the Paris Exposition. "The Government will permit no more stunt flights," he said.

Postmaster Stanley Smith was on Rural Route 2, Friday with the carrier, George Messick. Inspecting rural routes is a part of a postmaster's duty. This mentioned route is 71 miles in length with a distance of 426 miles traveled each week. There are 52 weeks in a year. So he is doing about 22,000 miles to the year, and we are guessing that 18 years is about the length of his service. So you can figure it yourself how often he has been around the world. Walter Johnson, carrier on Route 1 has served near the same length of time and the length of route is about the same. So the boys have done much traveling in their time in miles.

Martin Cromley will start Monday as substitute carrier for Mr. Messick who is taking vacation now.

Railroad Job Accepted

Young Joseph Snelling, who for a time was with the T. A. Boor filling station in North Ashville, has a place with the Pennsylvania railroad in Columbus as messenger boy. Joe's father, Harold Snelling, also has a position with this organization. Will Snelling, Joe's grandfather was with the Railway Light Co. for many years and great grandfather, Henry and mother Snelling had charge of the Ashville hotel for several years. And before coming to the hotel Mr. Snelling had a blacksmith shop at St. Paul.

Ball Club Strong

Manager S. L. Smith of the local ball team says his boys, the Ashville Merchants, very soon now will be playing real ball and will be able to win from the average team. "We expect to defeat the Springfield Glants this coming Sunday," he said.

Hall Opening Recalled

Sitting down at the corner by the Squire store and looking up the street at what was once "Steward's Opera House" (now Plum's Hall) Willis Green, South Bloomfield, asked us if we remembered the time when this hall was dedicated for public use? He felt sure it was the Fall of 1884. The show troupe of some fifteen people, called the Irene Taylor Co., played here for about two weeks with a new play for each night. He and Chris Keller, he said, furnished the music. "It was a good show and the hall was full every night," he continued. He thought "them were the good old times". Said Keller, his then side partner, now lived in Columbus but he couldn't play the cornet anymore because his teeth were out.

Attacked by Dogs

Jose Hedges' dogs, Wednesday evening, so Mrs. Steunor said, made an attack on her when she went to the Hedges home. The dogs have been rabies immuned and it is believed no serious results will follow.

Feed Bills Costly

George Bowers, Walnut township, who operates a large sized chickery, carries in stock now about 2500 layers. But at the present low price of eggs and the high cost of feed, profits are small, if any. Chick hatcheries this year have not done the fine business they usually do because of the high feed bill. But poultrymen tell us that next year will be "a good one."

W. C. T. U. Institute

The Ashville-Walnut Women's Christian Temperance Union held a joint institute at the home of Mrs. Della Hay with the Ashville Union in charge of the morning sessions when the Rev. T. M. Ricketts opened the sessions with a devotional service. The Rev. Walter C. Peters and the Rev. T. M. Ricketts spoke on "Current Trends in the Liquor Fight". The closing hour was taken by Mrs. Lucy Price

Episcopal Church Studies Marriage-Divorce Stand

Whether to broaden the position of the Episcopal Church on the moot question of marriage and divorce, or to retain the present restrictions, is a matter coming before many diocesan conventions all over the country at this time. During the month of May, 36 of the Episcopal dioceses and missionary districts hold their annual conventions, and the divorce question has already come up for action in some of them.

The diocese of Michigan urges action at the next General Convention of the Church, to be held in Cincinnati next October, to liberalize the present Canon Law concerning marriage and divorce. The diocese of Missouri has taken similar action. A group of theological students attending the General Seminary in New York has issued a statement arguing for a broader treatment of the question of remarriage after divorce, saying: "The important thing for our Episcopal Church is that we face a real and pressing problem of the present day realistically and bravely and with the same reverence for the facts of the case as for the words of the Lord in Holy Scripture."

There is a considerable sentiment in the Church, a growth of almost twenty years, for legislation by General Convention that will make easier the marriage of divorced persons.

The issue, which heretofore has come up repeatedly at General Conventions, was given new emphasis at this time by a group of Churchmen centering about St. Martin's Church, Providence, Rhode Island. This being General Convention year—it comes every third year—they became alarmed apparently over signs of aggressive liberalism in the midwest, evidenced by the action of the diocesan conventions of Michigan and Missouri, approving a liberal remarriage measure to be presented to the General Convention, which is the law-making body of the Church.

Virgil Cress and Miss Helen Yates will be in charge of the Epworth League meeting at 6:30 p. m. A mid-week service will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. and choir practice will be held on Thursday at the same hour.

The Weakness of Esau ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Jacob and Esau were sons of Isaac and Rebecca. Esau was a hunter. Returning from a hunt he was hungry and sold his birthright as elder son to Jacob for a mess of pottage.

In Isaac's 136th year, his wife and son Jacob deceived him into bequeathing his dying blessing to Jacob, who pretended he was Esau, while Esau was out hunting some venison for Isaac.

Upon Esau's return he learned of Jacob's treachery in stealing his father's blessing, and wept bitterly and vowed to kill Jacob as soon as their father was dead.

To escape Esau's wrath Jacob fled to his mother's brother's home. Rebecca wept as Jacob fled. She probably never saw him again.

The Weakness of Esau "BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for May 23 is Genesis 25:19-34; 26:34-35; 27:1-46, especially 25:27-34; 27:41-45, the Golden Text being 1 Cor. 9:25, "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things.")

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

THE HOME LIFE of Isaac and Rebecca and their sons Esau and Jacob was far from exemplary. Their tent was nauseating with the stench of marital duplicity, parental partiality and fratricidal hatred. One wonders at the grace of God that could accomplish any righteous purpose through such faulty instruments: "Esau was a skillful hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was a quiet man, dwelling in tents. Now Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison and Rebecca loved Jacob." Despite Isaac's knowledge that God's blessing to the nation was to come through Jacob, he planned to give it through Esau, and Rebecca thought that she must resort to duplicity and deceit to help God get his will over her husband's flesh-centered desires.

Esau Sells His Birthright

Jacob knew the weakness of his brother Esau, his contempt for the spiritual privilege represented in the birthright of the elder son. So he watched his chance to catch Esau in a weak moment when he might drive a hard bargain with him for the birthright Esau esteemed so lightly. The chance came in Esau's hunger on his return from hunting: "Esau said, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint. . . . And Jacob said, Sell me this day, thy birthright. So Esau despised his birthright." Esau had no eye for the future, no relish for the sacred or spiritual. He was willing to sell his soul eternally rather than discipline his body momentarily, and the price he set upon his soul was a mess of pottage, a bowl of red lentil soup! Judas Iscariot's price was 30 pieces of silver, Benedict Arnold's was $30,000. Before you set your price for your birthright of virtue, honor or integrity, won't you heed Jesus Christ as he asks, "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Jacob Deceives His Father

In his 136th year, feeling that his death was near, Isaac determined to bequeath his patriarchal blessing upon Esau, although he well knew that God meant this blessing for his younger son Jacob. And Rebecca, feeling that God could not secure his will without her chicanery, urged Jacob to disguise himself as Esau and steal the blessing from his blind father. We may not excuse Jacob for this treachery on the grounds of his tender youth, for he was a man of 77 years when this shameful deceit was perpetrated. Forty-four years later Jacob's own sons deceived him with the bloody coat of many colors, and in the bitterness of his grief over the supposed death of Joseph, Jacob learned how hard is the way of the transgressor. Truly, "the chickens do come home to roost" and "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Rebecca also reaps in despair the results of her duplicity and deceit as Jacob flees from the wrath of Esau, and his mother probably never saw his face again.

The lesson of all this for us is that life is more than what we call riches, or the attainment of what we often misname success, or the enjoyment of what the world calls pleasure. Real life is found only in the doing of the will of God. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

POVERTY AND PEACE

REPORTS on war prospects vary with almost every breeze that wafts its way across the Atlantic and sweeps our shore. The latest word on the subject has been uttered by Prime Minister Baldwin of Great Britain, who is alarmed. The international situation, he says, is "difficult and even menacing." Britain, to be on the safe side, has started a $7,500,000,000 defense program.

Much more encouraging news comes, however, from those who have made an exhaustive study of the general economic situation in Europe, particularly in Germany and Italy, around which the fears of war are centered. This news is heartening, paradoxically, because it is bad.

Economically, Germany under the Nazi rule has been going from bad to worse. Not only have its ordinary resources of foreign funds been practically exhausted, but in its efforts to rearm itself, keep its industries in operation and feed its people the Nazi regime has been compelled to draw heavily upon the special reserve fund created for an "emergency" through mobilization of privately owned securities.

Notwithstanding the rigid censorship, the denial of freedom of the press and of speech and the elaborate means adopted to prevent knowledge of true conditions in Germany from being gained by the German people or the outside world, the suppression of the truth is becoming increasingly difficult.

Dr. Paul Schellenberg, writing in "The Magazine of Wall Street," declares that "there are many signs that great parts of the population are dissatisfied with the Hitler regime." John C. de Wilde, reporting for the Foreign Policy Association on "Social Trends in the Third Reich," declares that foreign observers in Germany, "find much more grumbling than formerly" and that an increased psychological and economic tension appears to have developed.

The pinch of economic adversity also is being felt in Italy. While it continues and while the military prestige of the Fascist powers are brought to a low level by reverses in Spain, the dangers of war remain hearteningly remote.

NO MORE FISCAL NUDISM

IT is indeed gratifying that Congress gives signs of repealing the provision of the income tax law authorizing the publication of salaries from $15,000 upward.

To be sure, this is a day when half-baked radicals relish making successful citizens disrobe in public. The mania has brought a crop of "exposes" anent the high courts in the land.

But it will be a good thing to check this

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

MRS. DAVIS GOES AHEAD

WASHINGTON—Republicans are scarce in Washington these days. They do not scintillate at social gatherings. They keep in the background at the Senate. In general they behave as if Washington were a dark and dreary Democratic world, and the less seen of them the better.

One exception to this rule is Mrs. Pauline Morton Smith Sabin Davis, better known as Mrs. Charles Sabin, now the wife of Dwight F. Davis.

Mrs. Davis is the daughter of a Republican Cabinet member, is married to a Republican Cabinet member. All three of her husbands and all her traditions have been Republican. But she has to admit that she likes Democrats.

"They're so friendly," she says. "They always call you by your first name. Imagine any Republican in Coolidge's or Hoover's time doing that!"

FRIEND FARLEY

Mrs. Davis even likes the big boss of Democratic politics, Jim Farley. When she first came to Washington, Big Jim, with characteristic courtesy, asked what he could do for her.

"Two things," Mrs. Davis replied. "Get me a 'No Parking' sign, so I can drive up to my own front door. And second, get me a Supreme Court beau so I can tell when interesting decisions are coming out without going up to the Court and waiting for them."

Farley laughed and said nothing. Shortly thereafter, however, "No Parking" signs appeared in front of the Davis door.

Mrs. Davis had forgotten about her joke with Jim Farley, but when she saw him a week or so later, he said:

"Well, I got you the chance to park in front of your own door, but I don't know about that second request. You see, I haven't got much drag with the Supreme Court."

ANTI-DRY CRUSADE

Mrs. Davis has been a warring woman most of her life. Her father, Paul Morton, was Secretary of the Navy under Teddy Roosevelt. Her present husband, Dwight Davis, was Secretary of War under Coolidge.

But the war which made her famous was against Prohibition. In 1929 she formed the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, brought its membership to half a million (outnumbering the W.C.T.U.) and played an extremely important part in bringing about Repeal.

CRADLE POLITICS

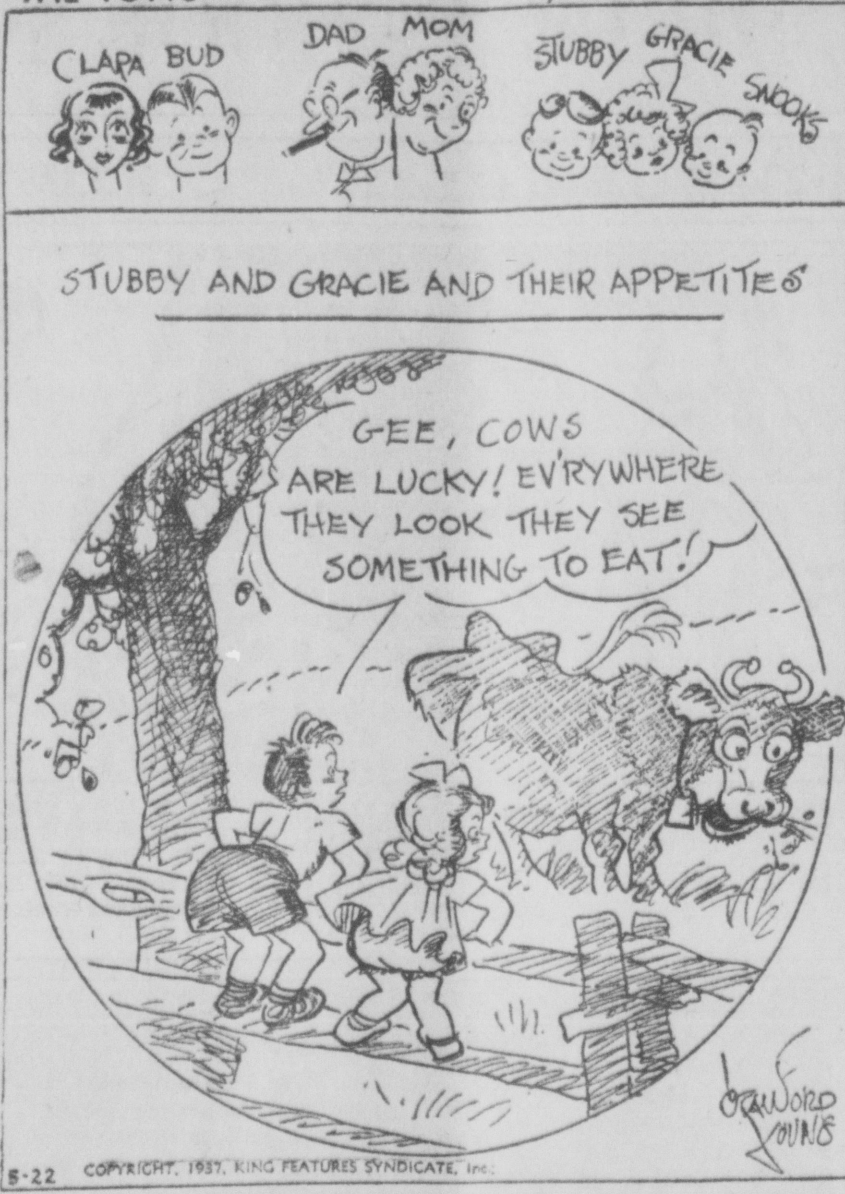

From her father, Paul Morton, Mrs. Davis inherited her name "Pauline" plus the millions derived from Morton's Salt — "It Pours."

She also received a good background in politics. For when only 16 she came with her father to Washington, made her debut here, and gave variety to her dinner parties by taking guests to the Senate for night debates.

First Aid Resuscitation as Respiration Stops

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
IN THOSE accidents in which respiration has ceased, the primary first aid treatment is to restore it. These circumstances are

Remember that a drowned person stops breathing, not on account of the water in his lungs, but from the shock of water hitting the lung surface. He may breathe in a very small amount of water and still stop breathing. It is unnecessary, therefore, to go through the old procedure of rolling the patient to get the water out of him. The thing to do is to start his breathing.

It may not be known that our methods of artificial respiration are based upon long and elaborate experiments. Many of these have been conducted and financed by such institutions as the American Gas company, the National Electric Light association and the Royal Life Saving Society of Great Britain.

The earliest method, perhaps, was that of Marshall Hall, in which he recommended that the victim be moved alternately from a position lying on his face to a position lying on his side. A little later Silvester used the method which most people, at least of my generation, know. The patient is placed on his back and the arms are forced laterally to produce inspiration, and then bringing the arms down and compressing the abdomen to produce expiration.

Prone Pressure Method
All Boy Scouts, gas and electric light employees, and life guards now are taught, however, the prone pressure method, introduced about 1890 by Professor Schafer of Edinburgh.

The prone pressure method of artificial respiration is to place the victim on his face with one arm curved under so that his forehead can rest on it; this brings his mouth and nose away from the ground and allows free breathing. The other arm is stretched on the ground over his head. The operator now rests on his knees, astraddle of the patient, and first brings his two open palms down on the side of the ribs toward the far end and most compressible part of the thorax. He presses these together and then springs back, taking his hands off the chest, which allows air to come in.

The advantages of the prone pressure method are that it can be done by one operator almost indefinitely without tiring him. Second, that with the patient on his face it insures that the tongue will fall forward, allowing a free passage of air. Third, that it makes the largest amount of air go in and out of the lungs.

Remember with artificial respiration that people have been revived after four hours of work, even when they were blue and apparently completely lifeless.

TO CELIA
From "The Forest"

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine,
Or leave a kiss within the cup
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honoring thee
As giving it a hope that there
It could not withered be;
But thou thereon didst only breathe,
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself but thee!

IN THE LILAC-RAIN

All in the lilac-rain,
Tender and sweet,
Brushing the window-pane
Sudden—and fleet
Came the dear wraith of her
Out of lost Mays—
(Ah, but the faith of her,
True to old ways!)

Scarcely her face I knew
Dim in the wet;
Only her eyes of blue
Who could forget!
Hand full of lilacs too—
Lilacs crowned, yet!

These were the flowers she loved
In the far years;
These were the showers she loved
Light as her tears!
These were the hours she loved—
Hope chasing fears!

Veiled in the lilac-rain
Comes she—and goes...
Sun through the clouds again,
Fresh the wind blows;
Mine, a swift pleasure-pain
None other knows.

CHAPTER 1

"HERE IT IS, Sandy—the third perfumed note in two weeks. Your fan mail is terrific!" Bee Colton leaned over a desk littered with papers, to address the tall and serious young man working so feverishly on a radio script. She waved a square, gray envelope aloft before depositing it with much ceremony in front of Andrew K. Knight.

Like every other person in the offices of radio station KROX, Bee knew that Sandy heartily disliked the work he had taken over temporarily when his friend, Mike Borst, was called out of town.

"Ah, it's food for romance, my son," she suggested. "She probably is some beautiful young thing who has fallen in love with your radio personality and—"

"Cut! You disbelieving females are what's wrong with this world, anyhow. Why can't you give another woman a break? Those are the most genuine letters I've ever read."

Sandy referred to the letters written by Alicia O'Day. Soon after he took over the Children's Hour program, he had received the first note from this worried mother whose son was seriously ill. Jamie, she said, had derived so much happiness from the program that he had insisted on her writing a rather unusual request. "He wants you to send him a 'recipe' on how to become a radio announcer when he gets well," explained Mrs. O'Day. Sandy was amused and a little touched by this plea from a gallant young mother. He made up a nonsensical formula and forwarded it with a picture of himself taken during hazy days at college. "That should cure the young rascal of his ambitions," he chuckled as he sent the damaging evidence to young Jamie. A subsequent letter thanked him for his thoughtful buoyancy, but contained the disturbing news that Jamie was no better.

Bee looked speculatively at the third note which Sandy was handling gingerly. What would be the next move?

Just as she was about to be glad to change O'Day to Knight any time in the week," she said cryptically, and chanted:

"Sandy Andy,
You're no dandy,
But you surely get the ladies
And the ladies' sickly babies
With your soulful,
Vibrant mouthful
Of radio pa-la-ver!"

Sandy flushed to the roots of his blonde hair, and Bee thought again how attractive was this sincere and unassuming young chap. Since he had come to KROX to take over the unaccustomed duties of conducting a radio program, he had won a host of friends. He took himself and everyone else too seriously for his own good, but strangely enough this was an important part of his attractiveness.

"The daffy kind," Sandy chuckled as he cut open the envelope, "he probably wants to be a lion tamer now. And great training that would be for a job like this."

He read the first line of Mrs. O'Day's letter, and then ejaculated, "Great Jumping Judas! Listen to this!" Bee paused in the doorway, startled by the excitement in his voice.

"It's that woman again, and little Jamie! She's going to commit suicide. Discouraged, she says, 'There's a lot about the baby being worse and then she says, 'We are taking the boat this afternoon, and that will be the end of the adventure of me and my son.'"

"Do something, don't sit there," said Bee, her eyes filling with tears.

He tore open the telegram feverishly.

out of sympathy for the woman who had found it so little worth while to battle the problems of her world.

Sandy jumped up, paced the floor, nervously combing his hand through his blonde hair. He strode up and down the small office, stumbling over the wastebasket, and gazing out over the uninspiring sky line of downtown Los Angeles, and muttering to himself.

"For once, I'm thankful for the radio," he said, and began to jot down a memorandum for an emergency broadcast. Within 14 minutes he had notified the police, the newspapers, and the steamship agencies of the threatened suicide and before the hour was out he had broadcast an urgent plea to Mrs. O'Day to have courage and to come to him for aid. The radio station's switchboard sparkled with red lights as calls began to pour in from sympathetic listeners who were anxious to help forestall a tragedy. Big Tom Fitch, head of the local office, stormed into Sandy's cubicle to demand an explanation for the way he had conducted radio time. He remained to plan with Sandy how to save Mrs. O'Day from her desperate-ness.

"Golly, it's too bad we can't sell this program to the O'Brien Detective Agency," moaned Oscar, the wisecracking office boy. "It's sure a shame to waste a real tear jerker like this one."

"What a soul you have, my son," Bee told him disgustedly.

"At least, it's too bad she isn't a relative of mine!" he said, remembering previous holidays earned on the strength of a pernickulous dying grandmother.

"You'll get a permanent vacation if you don't act more human, and get to work."

"It isn't human to work like I do," he countered, but obediently went over to the Journal's city desk to deliver full data on the O'Day case.

Sandy waited impatiently for some response to his efforts, furious at the lack of knowledge that handicapped the search for mother and son. The first letters were dated La Cresta, a small town along the coast of southern California. The last one bore a postmark in Los Angeles, and he feared that already he was too late.

The night staff came on duty and still Sandy sat at his desk. His long body was draped dejectedly on the swivel chair and he twisted aimlessly to and fro. His gray eyes were clouded with worry, and his fingers drummed impatiently on the desk. A green shaded lamp cast a small spot of brightness in the room.

Suddenly, a Western Union messenger edged into the arc of light, and handed Sandy a telegram addressed to himself. He tore it open feverishly.

"Well, I'll be a cockeyed sailor!" he exclaimed. "A cheap joke, and with me for the good natured sucker again. I'm fed up. FED UP!" He read the telegram again to be sure. Dated La Cresta, he hurriedly scanned the wire: "THERE IS NO MRS. O'DAY. NO JAMIE STOP. LETTERS WRITTEN BY LADY NAMED MADDEN WHO LIVES BY THE GREAT PALM POINT."

"A FRIEND."

Suddenly he grabbed his hat and tore from the office, banging the door behind him.

"Miss Johnston," he said to the night operator, "call the papers, call the police, and tell them all that the O'Day tragedy is just a comedy. Tell them there is no Mrs. O'Day, no dear sick son, only a lady named Madden—oh, yes, and a dumb but willing radio announcer. But before you do that, call the garage and have my car ready—I'm going to get out of this town, and get out quick!"

"But Mr. Knight, you can't do that. What about the program?"

"The program will go on all right. Blakeslee can handle it, and Mike will be back Monday, and you might tell Blakeslee for me not to believe all he reads in the papers. Here!"

He thrust the crumpled telegram in her hand, drew his shoulders up in a semblance of defiance, and whipped through the office.

The dinosaurs, it seems, were the biggest pieces of self-moving meat that ever swallowed an oak tree for a cocktail hour canape (which is French for hors d'oeuvres which, in turn, is French for little bits of indigestion served on a tray).

While the dinosaurs, my dears, were as big as heavyweight boxers, they possessed even less brain matter than the pedestrians (which is French for hors d'oeuvres which, in turn, is French for little bits of indigestion served on a tray).

These oversized animals were so dumb they ate up all the trees they could find instead of leaving the table a trifle hungry so they would have something left to eat on another day and not to mention retain that graceful waistline.

Eventually the dinosaurs got to eating each other up. This was very dramatic and had swell screen possibilities, but naturally reduced the number of dinosaurs until there was only one left and he — or she — of course, starved.

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a lovely morning of sunshine, so did linger only briefly over coffee, the sooner to be outside. Found the day ruined for one man who ruefully was contemplating a flat tire on his heavily laden straw truck on North Court street. But never are we all pleased at one time. By wagon to the post and then to the office for a session before a turn about the paves.

There's Charlie Mack and here comes Chet Blue, who has installed one of the finest electric signs of the village at his Main street furniture store. Noted that with the advent of warmer weather that Bob Anderson, the retired educator, is appearing earlier at the post. And that Senator Chappellear is spending more time in the open. There goes George Fitzpatrick, who to all appearances has recovered from his recent illness, and John Walters who has recovered most of the pounds he lost due to serious malady.

Laughed again at the story of the roughneck who was taken on a fox hunt and who, after the chase, was puzzled because everybody shunned him. "No wonder," a friend told him. "When you see the fox you are supposed to shout 'tally-ho'; and not 'there goes the son!'"

There goes Tom Renick, who the other morning provided a big laugh for his little daughter, Ann. Tom and Ann were in the garden and the child saw a bee and stepped on it. Tom thought that too cruel and thought to chastise her by tapping her leg with the handle of a rake he was using. But he missed her and fell in the lily pond with a loud splash. Ann went off to school laughing loudly.

In the country the first cutting of sweet clover in progress, and how lovely the perfume. Corn being plowed by some of the early planters; peas in full bloom, and wheat as thick as hair on a poodle's back. There goes Harry Baker, of Detroit, who moved away from the village 20 years ago.

Chatted with Guy Pettit, who is getting much pleasure out of his new trailer and who plans a jaunt to the Muskingum river over the week-end. And to Ralph Leach, who has no respect at all for trailers. Listened in as Gerald Hanley attempted to convince a group of skeptics that he really caught fish last Summer in Upper Michigan, they even refusing to believe when he exhibited photos. Why is it no one will believe a fisherman's tale of prowess? Why, I remember — but let it go.

There goes a car full of grinning tourists. Vacation time is here again and everywhere the folk talk of train, auto and boat trips, the city, the country and big woods. Never have been able to understand why anyone wishes to spend a vacation in a big city. They both tire and bore me after a couple of days. I gained more pleasure out of our own Pumpkin Show than I did the World Fair in Chicago, and as for the Great Lakes Exposition at Cleveland, I ducked that one last year and will do so again this Summer.

Frank A. Lynch, manager of Circleville Bottling Works, presented an educational movie, "Along Main Street" to high school students Wednesday morning in assembly.

The movie illustrated the five leading selling qualities of the individual, whether a professional or layman. Personal appearance, headed the list. Accompanying an immaculate appearance there must be a pleasant facial expression, friendly voice, interest in customers and enthusiasm.

The keynote in the movie was "The customer should be treated the same as a guest in one's own home."

Mr. Lynch has long been a popular patron of the high school.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, May 22.—(UP)—The Chicago Cubs, noted for their winning streaks, had a string of four victories today carrying them to third place in the National league.

There is nothing remarkable about four consecutive triumphs, but as soon as the Cubs win three straight talk immediately turns to famous winning streaks.

The Chicago Nationals started back in 1880 when they bowled over 21 in a row, and this figure wasn't surpassed until 1916 when the New York Giants ran a string of 26. The only time it was ever matched was by that 1935 Cub aggregation which started winning on Sept. 4 and didn't stop until it clinched the pennant. Other memorable Cub streaks are the 15 in a row last year; 18 in 1885; 14 in 1906 and 1932; and 13 in 1892 and 1928.

Most Streaks at Home
Most winning streaks are the result of long home stands, and that is how the Giants made their 26 record in 1916. The 17 in a row registered by the Giants in 1926 was on a road trip.

The Cubs ran off six in a row this year carrying them from last to fifth place. Yesterday's 8-5 victory over the Giants dropped the New Yorkers into fourth place and elevated the Cubs within a game of the second place St. Louis Cardinals who rapped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 11-2.

The leading Pittsburgh Pirates were finally stopped, 6-3, by the Boston Bees. Danny MacFayden turned the trick with his seven hit pitching. The Cincinnati Reds climbed out of the cellar and shoved Philadelphia in by nosing out the Phils, 6-5.

In the American league the leading Cleveland Indians held their slim margin by beating out the Washington Senators, 7-5, but they failed to gain in the close

Michigan Runners May Capture Big Ten Title

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 22.—(UP)—Everything that goes toward the making of a champion appeared to be in the hands of the University of Michigan today as 250 athletes made ready for the finals of the Big Ten track and field carnival today at Ferry field.

The Wolverines of Coach Charlie Hoyt, who won the Western conference indoor title and bowled their way through all competition this spring, led the qualifying trials yesterday and set a new conference record. These facts, along with the balance which Michigan possesses, boosted stock of the local team to the point where it appeared almost impossible to beat.

118 MILES PER HOUR REQUIRED FOR MAY 30 RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 22—

(UP)—At least a dozen racing cars were tuned to a delicate pitch today to try for unprecedented speeds in resumption of qualifications for the 500-mile race on Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Leading drivers and mechanics predicted an average of better than 116 miles an hour over the 25-mile qualifying run would be necessary to win one of the 33 places in the starting lineup May 31.

They estimated at least 28 of the cars not yet qualified were capable of beating 116 miles an hour. Twelve places were filled tentatively last week-end.

There was considerable doubt that the car in which Jimmy Snyder, Chicago, set an unofficial track record of 128 miles an hour this week would be ready for a "shop" run today. It has been "shopped" with a broken supercharger.

Principal threats to the 123.45 miles-an-hour record set by Bill Cummings, Indianapolis, when he qualified last week were Kelly Pettito, Los Angeles, winner of the 1935 race; Harry MacQuinn, Indianapolis, who turned a lap of 126 miles an hour this week during practice; Frank Brisko, Milwaukee, with a car yet untuned, and Ted Horn, Los Angeles.

About This And That In Many Sports

By BILL BRAUCHER

Mack's Club Clicks

NEW YORK, May 22 — It occurs to us that Connie Mack is getting into the American league race this year pretty cheap . . . he has assembled what appears to be the nucleus at least of another good ball club at bargain prices. . . . He got Catcher Frank Hayes for the price of a train ticket from New Jersey . . . Earl Brucker, second catcher, came from the Pacific Coast league for $7,500 . . . Pitcher Luther Thomas cost him $7,500 and two players named Elmer . . . Bill Werber was obtained in a trade for Pinky Higgins, a man Mr. Mack picked off the campus at University of Texas . . . Pitcher Lynn Nelson was obtained in spring from Memphis in return for two pitchers and two infielders the Tall Tactician never will miss . . . Shortstop Lamar Newsome cost $10,000 . . . First Baseman Chubby Dean and Outfielder Frank Parker were enlisted from the campus at Duke university . . . Second Baseman Bill Cissell came in the draft . . . Wally Moses cost $15,000 . . . Mack got Al Williams for two players . . . Lou Finney was purchased from Carrollton, Ga., for $7,500 . . . Mack has assembled a whole team for less than the $100,000 he paid for Lefty Grove (and he got that $100,000 back, by the way, from Mister Yawkey) . . . so there you are. . . .

Cochrane-Rowe

It's just a hunch in this corner that Mickey Cochrane does not understand Schoolboy Rowe, pitcher he suspended without pay . . . Rowe really does seem to be a fellow who falls victim to all the ills that flesh is heir to . . . and the Schoolboys' only flaw, as I see it, is his willingness to do too much, if that be a weakness . . . he'll pitch in there whether he's got it or not . . . and you know there are lots of days when pitchers just don't have it . . . Mister Cochrane's weakness is a disposition to be too exacting with pitchers, a trait he probably developed when handling great hurlers with the A's. . . .

Baseball Notes

Extra! Connie Mack is just a kid, after all . . . Mr. McGillicuddy's older brother, Michael, was found by an alert scribe near the press box in Shibe park the other day . . . Mike is 81 years old . . . Connie is a mere 74 . . . American league scribes are wondering how Babe Herman, new pitcher, ever got that reputation in the National league for catching fly balls on top of the conk . . . Babe has been turning in a pretty snappy fielding job this year, and hasn't once had need for a head-gear . . . Jack Kearns, who is promoting in Detroit now, picks Joe Louis to beat Jimmy Braddock . . . his principal reason being the long layoff Braddock has had . . . Kearns adds that a world champion eats too many steaks, and that the real good fighters are hungry men. . . .

DRESSSEN'S TEAM OUT OF CELLAR AFTER VICTORY

CINCINNATI, May 22 — (UP)—Out of the National league cellar for the second time this season, the Cincinnati Reds today set their sights on a first division berth.

The Reds climbed out of last place yesterday when they edged the Philadelphia Phillies 6 to 5.

The clubs were to meet again today. Al Hollinsworth was to work for Cincinnati, with Wayne LaMaster opposing him.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

IN PROPER ORDER

WHEN a suit contract offers an opportunity to use all three of the main ways of taking tricks, it is well to consider that usually their normal order is ruffs first, run the trumps second and use the side suit last for discards. Seldom will there be enough trumps on hand to vary this procedure by dropping the opponents' first and leaving enough for ruffing.

on the spades, but the diamonds can be eliminated only by ruffing. So the diamond Ace was led, then a small one which was trumped in the dummy. The spade Q was used for an entry to South's hand to lead another diamond. The spade J now enabled declarer to get back into his hand to draw trumps, after which the thirteenth spade in dummy took care of South's losing heart.

Had South attempted to draw trumps, the contract would have been hopeless. He also had to count on the spades being so distributed that he could afford to lead them twice without one of the opponents ruffing.

What bid by South will enable his side to get into the best contract, after East opened with 1-Diamond?

Dealer: South. Both side vulnerable.

South started the bidding on this deal with 1-Club, North responded with 1-Heart, South 2-Clubs, North 3-Hearts, South 3-No Trumps, North 4-Spades, South 4-No Trumps, North 5-No Trumps and South jumped to 7-Clubs.

Against this contract, the heart K was led and won with the A. The declarer sees that he must get rid of two diamonds and a losing heart. The latter can be parked

Need Seen For Lower Home Cost

There is a crying need for the construction of inexpensive, small homes according to A. L. Guckert, director of the Columbus District of the Federal Housing Administration.

"When we consider that most of our population has an annual income of less than $2,000, the necessity for concentrated action to alleviate the situation is of major importance," Director Guckert said.

A recent analysis made of applications for new construction commitments filed with the Federal Housing Administration shows that the average new house built is a two story, frame, consisting of five or six rooms, one bath and a one car detached garage, with a total value of land and buildings of $6,000, which is beyond the reach of the majority group.

Definite steps are being taken by the Federal Housing Administration to provide suitable neighborhood developments for new low cost housing projects, while conferences are being held with contractors and building supply dealers to stimulate group production, thus assuring lower costs per family unit.

Federal Housing loans are available to qualified borrowers for construction of new homes, the purchase of existing homes or the refinancing of present mortgages. Applications are made direct to your local financial institution. The money borrowed is local money and repayable locally, the Federal Housing Administration acting solely as an insuring agency.

ENTERTAINING SIMPLE WITH INFORMAL ROOM

An informal living room or playroom for the adults or young people in the family adds much to the pleasure of living and greatly decreases the care of housekeeping. It simplifies entertaining, encourages pleasant informal hospitality, restricts recreational activities to a given area, while preserving order and system in the remaining rooms of the house.

WELL-LIGHTED HALLS WELCOME TO GUESTS

Well-lighted halls are essential in the modern home. If there is no direct light in this part of the house, a glass panel may be substituted for wood in the front door. This type of improvement should be kept in mind when buying a home.

Borrower To Pay $30 For Month

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 22—

An analysis of the incomes of home buyers who are purchasing houses shows that 53.6 percent of these borrowers have incomes of $2,500 or less annually. One-third have reported incomes of $2,000 or less.

Approximately 80 percent of the borrowers purchase homes costing not more than two and one-half times their reported annual income, according to the analysis. Properties valued at less than twice their annual income are bought by 56 percent of the borrowers.

Sixty percent of the borrowers make monthly mortgage payments of $30 or less, and a quarter of the total number pay $20 or less a month. These payments include interest, amortization, service charge, and insurance premiums. For over one-half of the borrowers these monthly payments represent one-seventh or less of the purchaser's income. For 90 percent of the borrowers, mortgage payments represent less than one-fifth of their reported income.

Buyers whose incomes range from $2,001 to $2,500 annually represent 21.7 percent of the total number of borrowers. The $1,501 to $2,000 class represent 19.9 percent of the total number, and the $2,501 to $3,000 class represents 15.1 percent. Those whose incomes are $1,500 or less represent 12 percent of the total, 1.5 percent receiving $1,000 per year or less. Those with incomes of over $3,000 constitute 31.3 percent of all borrowers, 13.9 percent receiving $3,001 to $4,000, 7.3 percent $4,001 to $5,000, 4.1 percent $5,001 to $6,000, 4.4 percent $6,001 to $10,000, and 1.6 percent over $10,000.

SMALL WINDOW PROBLEM IS SOLVED BY MIRRORS

Small windows were a great favorite in houses built during an earlier period. They were frequently placed at either side of a fireplace, over bookcases. Many of these houses are of sound construction and have large, airy rooms.

If the curtaining of the various sized windows in these houses presents a problem to the new owner, a suggestion employed in a Jersey home may be of some value. Mirror glass was fitted over the little windows over the bookcases, and the result was a mirrored niche.

HOT WATER EQUIPMENT FOR USE IN HOUSEHOLD

A recent development in domestic hot-water heating equipment provides for the installation of a hot-water coil in a common oil, coal, or gas-fired warm-air convection heater. The hot water generated by this coil may be used for supplying domestic hot water for the household or to furnish hot-water radiator heat in one or more rooms distant from the convection heater. This arrangement is inexpensive and is particularly adaptable to very small homes in mild climates.

Six-Room Home

THIS house, which deviates from the more usual style of architecture found throughout this country, has three bedrooms, a large living room, dining room, and breakfast room as well. This kitchen is large and there is a commodious pantry. While the dwelling is designed for one floor, attic space could be finished at a later date, if desired. The Federal Housing Administration insured a $4,000 mortgage on the property, which is located at Fresno, Calif. The house is appraised at $5,000, and monthly payments of $41.13 will amortize the debt, and include payments on taxes, insurances, and service charges, in 19 1/2 years.

Questions and Answers

Q. I want to lay a wooden floor over concrete in my basement. Could it be insulated before laying the finish floor?

A. If there is sufficient head room to allow it, the most satisfactory method of laying a wood floor over a concrete basement floor is to lay sleepers over the concrete and nail the finish floor to them. The concrete should be mopped with a heavy coating of hot pitch to prevent the penetration of moisture, and the sleepers should be set on this. If possible, use 2 by 4 sleepers set on edge, and to prevent their warping after laying it would be well to use sound second-hand stock. Green stock may warp and cause a give to the floor in places that may be annoying. It should not be necessary to use any insulation, but if you want to be sure of protection you could lay a dampproof insulation board over the sleepers and nail the finish floor over that. If you use this latter method, some ventilation of the spaces between the sleepers should be provided. Without the insulation board enough air will seep through the cracks in the floor. If head room will not permit this method, it will be necessary to lay the flooring on the concrete. If the concrete floor is absolutely dry at all times, the wood flooring may be laid in mastic without other treatment. However, if there is any evidence of dampness, the floor should first be treated with a metallic waterproofing with a coating of rich cement mortar.

The roof, the most exposed part of a building, should receive close scrutiny. Leaks menace plaster and paint in rooms and halls below. Water-soaked ceilings become dangerous to occupants and may cause serious damage to the property. Assurance of a water-tight roof is necessary to the owner of a new or modernized home.

Need For Good Lumber Urged In Construction Of Homes

The lumber that goes into the frame of a house will determine largely the future durability of the house itself. Undried lumber of inferior grades is sure to shrink and probably warp during the slow drying process that will take place over a long period. This shrinkage and warpage will affect all the rest of the house; plaster will crack, doors and windows will stick, trim joints will open, plumbing and heating pipes will be forced out of line, forming pockets which will prevent complete drainage in water pipes and steam traps in steam pipes with a consequent hammering in the pipes and blocking of circulation so that some radiators will not heat. This can be avoided largely by the use of grade-marked lumber. But grade marking is just a safeguard against material inferior to that specified. In each case the grade of the lumber to be used should be specifically noted. Grade marking does not guarantee moisture content, however, as that is an element which can be upset by exposing the lumber during a long period of rain. Lumber should have not over 19 per cent moisture content when erected, and should be protected while on the job during rains, with tarpaulins or waterproof paper. Except in unusually dry weather, lumber that has been well dried before coming on the job will pick up some moisture even with the best of care, but if it is well dried to start with, and is not subjected to actual soaking, it will dry out rather quickly and will not change in volume enough to make an appreciable difference.

Points Discussed For Checking Bathrooms

Adequate bathroom facilities add as much to the comfort of a home as any one feature. It is one of the considerations especially checked when a home is being inspected for financing under the terms of the Insured Mortgage System of the Federal Housing Administration.

When a house is put up for resale the bathroom should be in good condition. The following check list emphasizes points that show the adequacy and convenience of the bath:

1. If a bath serves more than one bedroom, is it readily accessible from each room without having to pass through the other?
2. If the room is too small, could a change in the location of fixtures increase free space?
3. If the space is large, would a dressing alcove add to convenience?
4. Are there un concealed pipes on wall or ceiling which are unsightly?
5. Is there a minimum amount of dust-catching equipment?
6. Is the room properly ventilated?
7. Is the flooring in good condition and is it waterproof?
8. Are the walls waterproof and easy to clean?
9. Are fixtures in good repair?
10. Is the room properly heated and radiators and pipes located to avoid accidental burns?
11. Is the water supply adequate and the hot water instantaneous?
12. Is drainage system free from clogging?

High School 'Who's Who' Pays Tribute to Another Graduate

Nana Cooper, who resides with Mrs. Howard Thomas, the former Nina Cooper, member of the 1930 graduating class of Circleville high school, is the eighth outstanding senior chosen to appear in the "Who's Who" column.

Nana's personality is one in a million. Her cooperation and willingness to help have been her two most valuable assets.

As a member of the office staff she has been very capable. Scholastically, she ranks fourth in the senior class. Her high ranking alone shows her interest in all her subjects. She is a member of the girls' glee club and Epsilon Mu Sigma, an honorary English society. Her interest in dramatics resulted in her being cast in the Senior class play, "Wings of the Morning." Last year Nana was business manager of "The Boomer", the junior class play.

Those who appear in the Who's Who column were chosen by a faculty committee of five. The order of their appearance is by lot.

457 MINERS AND COAL OPERATORS TO TALK PEACE

WILSONVILLE, Ill., May 22 — (UP) — Officials of Superior Coal company and the 457 strikers who are "sitting down" in the dingy caverns of Mine No. 4 waited for each other today to make the first move for peace.

Leaders of both sides said they were willing to "talk things over," neither made a move to do so.

Fred F. Pfister, company president, waited in his offices in Wilsonville for a reply to his offer to confer with strike leaders "if they come up here." The strikers offered no reply, except that they would "continue the fight as long as we are able."

Strains of harmonicas, slap of playing cards, and the clang of pitched horseshoes rang through the corridors and mine-rooms of the coal pit into the early hours. The men settled down to sleep in blankets their wives and relatives sent them on the company elevator. They rose to breakfast from the well-stocked larder in the car-burn which they have converted into a kitchen. Apparently they were happy and comfortable.

FIRST TEACHER IS HONORED AT COMMENCEMENT

Miss Edith Spangler, of Tilton, the teacher who started the Washington township 1937 graduating class in the first grade of school 12 years ago, was honored Friday evening at commencement exercises.

Miss Spangler was the first grade teacher when the class of 1937 started in school with 23 members in the class. When the group reached the eighth grade it had been reduced to 17. When it graduated there were six members.

Dr. James Thomas, of Columbus, was the speaker at the graduation, providing the students and the crowd of 250 in the auditorium with many suggestions for success. An accord-ion band from Columbus provided music.

All teachers of the school were hired for another year, Friday, when the board had its regular meeting. Wendell Boyer is the school's efficient superintendent.

TWO FRENCHMEN SEEK AVIATION MARK TO TOKYO

Doret and Micheletti intend to fly via Athens, Karachi, India and Rangoon, Burma, keeping in the air as much as possible day and night.

RUSSIANS START AIR BASE WORK AT NORTH POLE

Scientists to Establish Station 12 Miles From Top of World

FOUR MEN TO REMAIN

Moscow-San Francisco Line to Be Established

MOSCOW, May 22 — (UP) — A group of Russian scientists began building a meteorological station 12½ miles from the North Pole today after a historic flight to the top of the world.

Four of the men who made the flight will remain at the pole for a year, studying weather conditions and establishing a base that it is hoped will be an adjunct of an eventual Moscow-San Francisco airplane service.

They have with them a little Arctic dog, whose barking will warn them of the approach of predatory polar bears—with which they intend to augment their diet of concentrated foods.

To Place Three Flags

The men intend to make a trip over the ice to the North Pole, spend 24 hours there and plant three flags where Peary planted the American flag in 1909 — one of red silk bearing Josef Stalin's portrait, one with the crest of the Soviet Union, and the blue flag of the Russian Arctic administration.

Food and fuel for 18 months, a collapsible house and scientific equipment is to be dropped by parachute or actually landed on the ice floe where the airplane crew is drifting.

They are at the scene where 28 years ago, on April 6, 1909, Admiral Robert E. Peary, his American Negro aide, Matt Henson and four Eskimos planted the American flag.

Peary and his men stayed 30 hours. The Russians intend to stay for good, for it is proposed that this North Pole weather station shall be permanent, fixed on the ice under which Peary found 9,000 feet of polar sea.

The historic landing was made yesterday morning by members of an expedition of 42 men who are based on Rudolf island, in the Arctic ocean north of the European continent.

"Hero at Controls"

For the polar landing the four-motored, Russian designed plane USSR-N-170 was selected. It took off at 5 a. m. yesterday with Mikhail Vodopianov, whose Arctic flights won him the title "hero of the Soviet Union" at the controls, and Prof. Otto Schmidt, Russia's leading Arctic expert, in command.

At 11:10 a. m. the plane circled wide over the pole and at 11:35 a. m. it was landed safely on the ice 20 kilometers (12½ miles) from the pole.

News of the landing was flashed at once from the plane's radio set to Moscow. During the message, however, the plane's transmitter (Continued on Page Two)

COLUMBUS MAY WIN RATE CUT

Light Company Discussing New Schedules With City Officials

COLUMBUS, May 22 — Although company officials said they had "nothing definite" to announce, it is reported that the Columbus, Railway, Power and Light Co. is contemplating a cut in its local light rate schedules.

It was learned the question of a reduction has been discussed for several months by utility officials and councilmen.

Cuts in electric rates have been made in Cleveland as recently as May 1, and since last August reductions have been made to consumers in Dayton, Cincinnati, Youngstown, Sidney, Gallipolis, Hillsboro, Piqua, Wilmington and Xenia.

Columbus consumers now are paying a 5-cent per kilowatt hour maximum charge under a five-year contract embodied in an ordinance approved by the voters in the Nov. 6, 1934, election. Previously the maximum charge was 6-cents a kilowatt hour.

The residential schedule, approved by voters and which will be in effect until Nov. 15, 1939, unless there is an agreement by both parties (Continued on Page Two)

Twin Found in Abdominal Cavity of Oregon Infant

PORTLAND, Ore., May 22 — (UP) — A baby girl, 13 months old, will undergo an operation at Doernbecher children's hospital next week for removal of a twin that has developed in her abdominal cavity.

It is one of the rarest medical phenomena, medical books contain only brief references to the subject, which is called teratoma.

X-rays showed almost a complete skeleton within the baby's abdomen. The girl was not identified. She was brought here from Douglas county for treatment.

Dr. Richard B. Dillehunt, head of the University of Oregon medical school, said the growth is caused by a cellular division occurring shortly after conception. Occasionally, he said, there have been records of where one twin

JUSTICES MEET TO TALK VITAL NEW DEAL LAW

Only Two Days Remaining For Tribunal to Tell its Findings

GATHER AGAIN MONDAY

Van Devanter Retirement Causes Situation

WASHINGTON, May 22 — (UP) — The supreme court met today to complete its decisions on two phases of the New Deal's Social Security act and other legislation.

Probability that opinions in the Social Security cases will be read Monday was generally accepted by court followers. Only two decision days remain — Monday and a week from Tuesday — and in the past only a few minor cases have been left for the final day of the session.

It was regarded as possible that the court would fail to make a final determination of the issue at the present term because of the probably close division on the Social Security question.

Continuation Possible

There is nothing which compels the tribunal to decide a case at the same term at which it is heard, but that practice has generally been followed in the past. The court could hold the case over or order it re-argued in the fall.

The situation created by the pending retirement of Justice Willis Van Devanter might work toward such a move in the Social Security cases. This would prove particularly true if the decision in (Continued on Page Two)

DUKE ANGERED AT BOYCOTT OF HIS MARRIAGE

MONTS, France, May 22 — (UP) — The Duke of Windsor, seriously worried over a virtual British government boycott of his wedding, has resorted to knitting to soothe his jangling nerves, it was understood today.

As the result, it was said, Mrs. Wallis Warfield has a new sweater which he knitted for her in wool of the new "Wally blue" shade. It was finished last night and presented to her this morning.

Since the government's ostracism campaign, it was said, the duke has become more and more nervous, and slept so badly that he knitted and parled on the sweater assiduously until late at night.

It was reported that Mrs. Warfield was kept busy consoling the duke. Events of the last two days have filled him with bitterness against the government, it was reported, and have been a severe blow to his pride.

The crowd at the exercises was estimated at 325.

YOUTHS CAUGHT TRYING TO FLEE FAIRFIELD JAIL

LANCASTER, May 22 — An attempt of four Columbus youths to escape from the Fairfield county jail was frustrated by Sheriff William Belhorn.

The youths, bound to the grand jury under $1,000 bond each on charges of breaking and entering stores in Baltimore and Lithopolis, and involved in other nearby counties, tried to chisel a section of the 18-inch prison wall away sufficiently to permit escape.

They had penetrated the wall about a foot using pieces of steel from a prison cot. The sheriff believed they had been working on the wall several days and had concealed their work behind a pile of window sashes.

Those implicated in the attempted escape were James, 32, Allen, 18, and Henry Morris, 27, and Orval Woods, 20.

Episcopal Church Studies
Marriage-Divorce Stand

Whether to broaden the position of the Episcopal Church on the moot question of marriage and divorce, or to retain the present restrictions, is a matter coming before many diocesan conventions all over the country at this time. During the month of May, 36 of the Episcopal dioceses and missionary districts hold their annual conventions, and the divorce question has already come up for action in some of them.

The diocese of Michigan urges action at the next General Convention of the Church, to be held in Cincinnati next October, to liberalize the present Canon Law concerning marriage and divorce. The diocese of Missouri has taken similar action. A group of theological students attending the General Seminary in New York has issued a statement arguing for a broader treatment of the question of remarriage after divorce, saying: "The important thing for our Episcopal Church is that we face a real and pressing problem of the present day realistically and bravely and with the same reverence for the facts of the case as for the words of the Lord in Holy Scripture."

There is a considerable sentiment in the Church, a growth of almost twenty years, for legislation by General Convention that will make easier the marriage of divorced persons.

The issue, which heretofore has come up repeatedly at General Conventions, was given new emphasis at this time by a group of Churchmen centering about St. Martin's Church, Providence, Rhode Island. This being General Convention year—it comes every third year—they became alarmed apparently over signs of aggressive liberalism in the midwest, evidenced by the action of the diocesan conventions of Michigan and Missouri, approving a liberal remarriage measure to be presented to the General Convention, which is the law-making body of the Church.

The Weakness of Esau

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Genesis 24:19-34; 26:34, 35; 27:1-44.

Jacob and Esau were sons of Isaac and Rebecca. Esau was a hunter. Returning from a hunt he was hungry and sold his birthright as elder son to Jacob for a mess of pottage.

In Isaac's 136th year, his wife and son Jacob deceived him into bequeathing his dying blessing to Jacob, who pretended he was Esau, while Esau was out hunting some venison for Isaac.

Upon Esau's return he learned of Jacob's treachery in stealing his father's blessing, and wept bitterly and vowed to kill Jacob as soon as their father was dead.

To escape Esau's wrath Jacob fled to his mother's brother's home. Rebecca wept as Jacob fled. She probably never saw him again.

(GOLDEN TEXT—I Cor. 9:25.)

The Weakness of Esau

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for May 23 is Genesis 25:19-34; 26:34-35; 27:1-46, especially 25:27-34; 27:41-45, the Golden Text being I Cor. 9:25, "Every man that striveth in the games exerciseth self-control in all things.")

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

THE HOME LIFE of Isaac and Rebecca and their sons Esau and Jacob was far from exemplary. Their tent was nauseating with the stench of marital duplicity, parental partiality and fratricidal hatred. One wonders at the grace of God that could accomplish any righteous purpose through such faulty instruments: "Esau was a skillful hunter, a man of the field; and Jacob was a quiet man, dwelling in tents. Now Isaac loved Esau, because he did eat of his venison and Rebecca loved Jacob." Despite Isaac's knowledge that God's blessing to the nation was to come through Jacob, he planned to give it through Esau, and Rebecca thought that she must resort to duplicity and deceit to help God get his will over her husband's flesh-centered desires.

Esau Sells His Birthright

Jacob knew the weakness of his brother Esau, his contempt for the spiritual privilege represented in the birthright of the elder son. So he watched his chance to catch Esau in a weak moment when he might drive a hard bargain with him for the birthright Esau esteemed so lightly. The chance came in Esau's hunger on his return from hunting: "Esau said, Feed me, I pray thee, with that same red pottage; for I am faint . . . and Jacob said, Sell me this day, thy birthright. So Esau despised his birthright." Esau had no eye for the future, no relish for the sacred or spiritual. He was willing to sell his soul eternally rather than discipline his body momentarily, and the price he set upon his soul was a mess of pottage, a bowl of red lentil soup. Judas Iscariot's price was 30 pieces of silver, Benedict Arnold's was $30,000. Before you set your price for your birthright of virtue, honor or integrity, won't you heed Jesus Christ as he asks, "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

Jacob Deceives His Father

In his 136th year, feeling that his death was near, Isaac determined to bequeath his patriarchal blessing upon Esau, although he well knew that God meant this blessing for his younger son Jacob. And Rebecca, feeling that God could not secure his will without her chicanery, urged Jacob to disguise himself as Esau and steal the blessing from his blind father. We may not excuse Jacob for this treachery on the grounds of his tender youth, for he was a man of 77 years when this shameful deceit was perpetrated. Forty-four years later Jacob's own sons deceived him with the bloody coat of many colors, and in the bitterness of his grief over the supposed death of Joseph, Jacob learned how hard is the way of the transgressor. Truly, "the chickens do come home to roost" and "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Rebecca also reaps in despair the results of her duplicity and deceit as Jacob flees from the wrath of Esau, and his mother probably never saw his face again.

The lesson of all this for us is that life is more than what we call riches, or the attainment of what we often misname success, or the enjoyment of what the world calls pleasure. Real life is found only in the doing of the will of God. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

POVERTY AND PEACE
REPORTS on war prospects vary with almost every breeze that wafts its way across the Atlantic and sweeps our shore. The latest word on the subject has been uttered by Prime Minister Baldwin of Great Britain, who is alarmed. The international situation, he says, is "difficult and even menacing." Britain, to be on the safe side, has started a $7,500,000,000 defense program.

Much more encouraging news comes, however, from those who have made an exhaustive study of the general economic situation in Europe, particularly in Germany and Italy, around which the fears of war are centered. This news is heartening, paradoxically, because it is bad. Economically, Germany under the Nazi rule has been going from bad to worse. Not only have its ordinary resources of foreign funds been practically exhausted, but in its efforts to rearm itself, keep its industries in operation and feed its people the Nazi regime has been compelled to draw heavily upon the special reserve fund created for an "emergency" through mobilization of privately owned securities. Notwithstanding the rigid censorship, the denial of freedom of the press and of speech and the elaborate means adopted to prevent knowledge of true conditions in Germany from being gained by the German people or the outside world, the suppression of the truth is becoming increasingly difficult.

Dr. Paul Schellenberg, writing in "The Magazine of Wall Street," declares that "there are many signs that great parts of the population are dissatisfied with the Hitler regime." John C. de Wilde, reporting for the Foreign Policy Association on "Social Trends in the Third Reich," declares that foreign observers in Germany, "find much more grumbling than formerly" and that an increased psychological and economic tension appears to have developed.

The pinch of economic adversity also is being felt in Italy. While it continues and while the military prestige of the Fascist powers are brought to a low level by reverses in Spain, the dangers of war remain hearteningly remote.

NO MORE FISCAL NUDISM
IT is indeed gratifying that Congress gives signs of repealing the provision of the income tax law authorizing the publication of salaries from $15,000 upward. To be sure, this is a day when half-baked radicals relish making successful citizens disrobe in public. The mania has brought a crop of "exposes" anent the high courts in the land. But it will be a good thing to check this

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round
By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN
MRS. DAVIS GOES AHEAD
WASHINGTON—Republicans are scarce Washington these days. They do not scintillate at social gatherings. They keep in the background at the Senate. In general they behave as if Washington were a dark and dreary Democratic world, and the less seen of them the better.
One exception to this rule is Mrs. Pauline Morton Smith Sabin Davis, better known as Mrs. Charles Sabin, now the wife of Dwight F. Davis.
Mrs. Davis is the daughter of a Republican Cabinet member, is married to a Republican Cabinet member. All three of her husbands and all her traditions have been Republican. But she has to admit that she likes Democrats.
"They're so friendly," she says. "They always call you by your first name. Imagine any Republican in Coolidge's or Hoover's time doing that!"

FRIEND FARLEY
Mrs. Davis even likes the big boss of Democratic politics, Jim Farley. When she first came to Washington, Big Jim, with characteristic courtesy, asked what he could do for her.
"Two things," Mrs. Davis replied. "Get me a 'No Parking' sign, so I can drive up to my own front door. And second, get me a Supreme Court beau so I can tell when interesting decisions are coming out without going up to the Court and waiting for them."
Farley laughed and said nothing. Shortly thereafter, however, "No Parking" signs appeared in front of the Davis door.
Mrs. Davis had forgotten about her joke with Jim Farley, but when she saw him a week or so later, he said:
"Well, I got you the chance to park in front of your own door, but I don't know about that second request. You see, I haven't got much drag with the Supreme Court."

ANTI-DRY CRUSADE
Mrs. Davis has been a warring woman most of her life. Her father, Paul Morton, was Secretary of the Navy under Teddy Roosevelt. Her present husband, Dwight Davis, was Secretary of War under Coolidge.
But the war which made her famous was against Prohibition. In 1929 she formed the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, brought its membership to half a million (outnumbering the W.C.T.U.) and played an extremely important part in bringing about Repeal.

CRADLE POLITICS
From her father, Paul Morton, Mrs. Davis inherited her name "Pauline" plus the millions derived from Morton's Salt — "It Pours."
She also received a good background in politics. For when only 16 she came with her father to Washington, made her debut here, and gave variety to her dinner parties by taking guests to the Senate for night debates.

childishness and go back to the old-fashioned principle that a man's earnings are his own business, provided only that they have been gained in a lawful manner.

of the pounds he lost due to serious malady.
Laughed again at the story of the roughneck who was taken on a fox hunt and who, after the chase, was puzzled because everybody shunned him. "No wonder," a friend told him. "When you see the fox you are supposed to shout 'tally-ho'; and not 'there goes the son'!"
There goes Tom Renick, who the other morning provided a big laugh for his little daughter, Ann. Tom and Ann were in the garden and the child saw a bee and stepped on it. Tom thought that too cruel and thought to chastise her by tapping her leg with the handle of a rake he was using. But he missed her and fell in the lily pond with a loud splash. Ann went off to school laughing, loudly.
In the country the first cutting of sweet clover in progress, and how lovely the perfume. Corn being plowed by some of the early planters; peas in full bloom, and wheat as thick as hair on a poodle's back. There goes Harry Baker, of Detroit, who moved away from the village 20 years ago.

Chatted with Guy Pettit, who is getting much pleasure out of his new trailer and who plans a jaunt to the Muskingum river over the week-end. And to Ralph Leach, who has no respect at all for trailers. Listened in as Gerald Hanley attempted to convince a group of skeptics that he really caught fish last Summer in Upper Michigan, they even refusing to believe when he exhibited photos. Why is it no one will believe a fisherman's tale of prowess? Why, I remember — but let it go.
There goes a car full of grinning tourists. Vacation time is here again and everywhere the folk talk of train, auto and boat trips, the city, the country and big woods. Never have been able to understand why anyone wishes to spend a vacation in a big city. They both tire and bore me after a couple of days. I gained more pleasure out of our own Pumpkin Show than I did the World Fair in Chicago, and as for the Great Lakes Exposition at Cleveland, I ducked that one last year and will do so again this Summer.

First Aid Resuscitation as Respiration Stops

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
IN THOSE accidents in which respiration has ceased, the primary first aid treatment is to restore it. These circumstances are drowning, electric shock from live wires, and carbon monoxide poisoning from the exhaust of motor cars.

Dr. Clendenning

All other methods for treatment of shock, etc., can wait upon this. Remember that a drowned person stops breathing, not on account of the water in his lungs, but from the shock of water hitting the lung surface. He may breathe in a very small amount of water and still stop breathing. It is unnecessary, therefore, to go through the old procedure of rolling the patient to get the water out of him. The thing to do is to start his breathing.

It may not be known that our methods of artificial respiration are based upon long and elaborate experiments. Many of these have been conducted and financed by such institutions as the American Gas company, the National Electric Light association and the Royal Life Saving Society of Great Britain.
The earliest method, perhaps, was that of Marshall Hall, in which he recommended that the victim be moved alternately from a position lying on his face to a position lying on his side. A little later Silvester used the method which most people, at least of my generation, know. The patient is placed on his back and the arms forcibly raised over the head, pulling the ribs out laterally to produce inspiration, and then compressing the arms down and compressing the abdomen to produce expiration.
Prone Pressure Method
All Boy Scouts, gas and electric light employees, and life guards now are taught, however, the prone pressure method, introduced about 1900 by Professor Schafer of Edinburgh.
The prone pressure method of artificial respiration is to place the victim on his face with one arm curved under so that his forehead can rest on it; this brings his mouth and nose away from the ground and allows free breathing. The other arm is stretched on the ground over his head. The operator now rests on his knees, astraddle of the patient, and first brings his two open palms down on the side of the ribs toward the far end and most compressible part of the thorax. He presses these together and then springs back, taking his hands off the chest, which allows air to come in.
The advantages of the prone pressure method are that it can be done by one operator almost indefinitely without tiring him. Second, that with the patient on his face it insures that the tongue will fall forward, allowing a free passage of air. Third, that it makes the largest amount of air go in and out of the lungs.
Remember with artificial respiration that people have been revived after four hours of work, even when they were blue and apparently completely lifeless.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine,

And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise

But might I I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.
I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honoring thee

CHAPTER I
"HERE IT IS, Sandy—the third perturbed note in two weeks. Your fan mail is terrific!" See Colton leaped over a desk littered with papers, to address the tall and serious young man working so feverishly on a radio script. She waved a square, gray envelope aloft before depositing it with much ceremony in front of Andrew K. Knight.

Like every other person in the offices of radio station KROX, Bee knew that Sandy heartily disliked the work he had taken over temporarily when his friend, Mike Borst, was called out of town.

"Ah, it's food for romance, my son," she suggested. "She probably is some beautiful young thing who has fallen in love with your radio personality and—"

"Cut! You disbelieving females are what's wrong with this world, anyhow. Why can't you give another woman a break? Those are the most genuine letters I've ever read."

Sandy referred to the letters written by Alicia O'Day. Soon after he took over the Children's Hour program, he had received the first note from this worried mother whose son was seriously ill. Jamie, she said, had derived so much happiness from the program that he had insisted on her writing a rather unusual request.

"He wants you to send him a 'recipe' on how to become a radio announcer when he gets well," explained Mrs. O'Day. Sandy was amused and a little touched by this plea from a gallant young mother.

He made up a nonsensical formula and forwarded it with a picture of himself taken during hazing days at college. "That should cure the young rascal of his ambitions," he chuckled as he sent the damaging evidence to young Jamie. A subsequent letter thanked him for his thoughtful buffoonery, but contained the disturbing news that Jamie was no better.

Bee looked speculatively at the third note which Sandy was handling gingerly. What would be the next move?

Just the same I'll bet she'd be glad to change O'Day to Knight any time in the week," she said cryptically, and chanted:

"Sandy Andy, You're no dandy, But you surely get the ladies And the ladies' sickly babies With the scouful, Vibrant mouthful Of radio pa-laver!"

Sandy flushed to the roots of his blonde hair, and Bee thought again how attractive was this sincere and unassuming young chap. Since he had come to KROX to take over the unaccustomed duties of conducting a radio program, he had won a host of friends. He took himself and everyone else too seriously for his own good, but strangely enough this was an important part of his attractiveness.

"The daffy kind," Sandy chuckled as he cut open the envelope, "he probably wants to be a lion tamer now. And great training that would be for a job like this."

He read the first line of Mrs. O'Day's letter, and then ejaculated, "Great Jumping Judas! Listen to this!" Bee paused in the doorway, startled by the excitement in his voice.

"It's that woman again, and little Jamie! She's going to commit suicide. Discouraged, she says. There's a lot about the baby being worse and then she says, 'We are taking the boat this afternoon, and that will be the end of the adventure of me and my son.'"

"Do something, don't sit there," said Bee, her eyes filling with tears.

He tore open the telegram feverishly.

out of sympathy for the woman who had found it so little worth while to battle the problems of her world.

Sandy jumped up, paced the floor, nervously combing his hand through his blonde hair. He strode up and down the small office, stumbling over the wastebasket, gazing out over the uninspiring skyline of downtown Los Angeles, and muttering to himself.

"For once, I'm thankful for the radio," he said, and began to jot down a memorandum for an emergency broadcast. Within 14 minutes he had notified the police, the newspapers, and the steamship agencies of the threatened suicide and before the hour was out he had broadcast an urgent plea to Mrs. O'Day to have courage and to come to him for aid. The radio station's switchboard sparkled with red lights as calls began to pour in from sympathetic listeners who were anxious to help forestall a tragedy. Big Tom Fitch, head of the local office, stormed into Sandy's cubicle to demand an explanation for the way he had confiscated radio time. He remained to plan with Sandy how to save Mrs. O'Day from her desperateness.

"Golly, it's too bad we can't sell this program to the O'Brien Detective Agency," moaned Oscar, the wisecracking office boy. "It's sure a shame to waste a real tear-jerker like this one."

"What a soul you have, my son," Bee told him disgustedly.

"At least, it's too bad she isn't a relative of mine!" he said, remembering previous holidays earned on the strength of a pernicious dying grandmother.

"You'll get a permanent vacation if you don't act more human, and get to work."

"It isn't human to work like I do," he countered, but obediently went over to the Journal's city desk to deliver full data on the O'Day case.

Sandy waited impatiently for some response to his efforts, furious at the lack of knowledge that handicapped the search for mother and son. The first letters were dated La Cresta, a small town along the coast of southern California. The last one bore a postmark in Los Angeles, and he feared that already he was too late.

The night staff came on duty and still Sandy sat at his desk. His long body was draped dejectedly on the swivel chair and he twisted aimlessly to and fro. His gray eyes were clouded with worry, and his fingers drummed impatiently on the desk. A green shaded lamp cast a small spot of brightness in the room.

Suddenly, a Western Union messenger edged into the arc of light, and handed Sandy a telegram addressed to himself. He tore it open feverishly.

"Well, I'll be a cockeyed sailor!" he exclaimed. "A cheap joke, and with me for the good natured sucker again. I'm fed up. FED UP!" He read the telegram again to be sure. Dated La Cresta, he hurriedly scanned the wire:

"THERE IS NO MRS. O'DAY NO JAMIE STOP LETTERS WRITTEN BY LADY NAMED MADDEN WHO LIVES BY THE GREAT PALM POINT."

"A FRIEND."

Suddenly he grabbed his hat and tore from the office, banging the door behind him.

"Miss Johnston," he said to the night operator, "call the papers, call the police, and tell them all that the O'Day tragedy is just a comedy. Tell them there is no Mrs. O'Day, no dear sick son, only a lady named Madden—oh, yes, and a dumb but willing radio announcer. But before you do that, call the garage and have my car ready—I'm going to get out of this town, and get out quick!"

"But Mr. Knight, you can't do that. What about the program?" "The program will go on all right. Blakeslee can handle it, and Mike will be back Monday. And you might tell Blakeslee for me not to believe all he reads in the papers. Here!"

He thrust the crumpled telegram in her hand, drew his shoulders up in a semblance of defiance, and whipped through the office.

CHICAGO CUBS WIN FOUR GAMES IN ROW TO CLIMB TO THIRD PLACE

GIANTS CLUBBED IN 8-5 CONTEST, LOSING GROUND

Pirates Fall Before Bees With Danny MacFayden on Mound

INDIANS HOLD MARGIN

Dickey's Single Off Fred Blake Beats Browns

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK, May 22.—(UP)—The Chicago Cubs, noted for their winning streaks, had a string of four victories today carrying them to third place in the National league.

There is nothing remarkable about four consecutive triumphs, but as soon as the Cubs win three straight talk immediately turns to famous winning streaks.

The Chicago Nationals started back in 1880 when they bowled over 21 in a row, and this figure wasn't surpassed until 1916 when the New York Giants ran a string of 26. The only time it was ever matched was by that 1935 Cub aggregation which started winning on Sept. 4 and didn't stop until it clinched the pennant. Other memorable Cub streaks are the 15 in a row last year; 18 in 1885; 14 in 1906 and 1932; and 13 in 1892 and 1928.

Most Streaks at Home

Most winning streaks are the result of long home stands, and that is how the Giants made their 26 record in 1916. The 17 in a row registered by the Giants in 1928 was on a road trip.

The Cubs ran off six in a row this year carrying them from last to fifth place. Yesterday's 8-5 victory over the Giants dropped the New Yorkers into fourth place and elevated the Cubs within a game of the second place St. Louis Cardinals who rapped the Brooklyn Dodgers, 11-2.

The leading Pittsburgh Pirates were finally stopped, 6-3, by the Boston Bees. Danny MacFayden turned the trick with his seven hit pitching. The Cincinnati Reds climbed out of the cellar and shoved Philadelphia in by nosing out the Phils, 6-5.

In the American league the leading Cleveland Indians held their slim margin by beating out the Washington Senators, 7-5, but they failed to gain in the close

Michigan Runners May Capture Big Ten Title

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 22.—(UP)—Everything that goes toward the making of a champion appeared to be in the hands of the University of Michigan today as 250 athletes made ready for the finals of the Big Ten track and field carnival today at Ferry field.

The Wolverines of Coach Charlie Hoyt, who won the Western conference indoor title and bowled their way through all competition this spring, led the qualifying trials yesterday and set a new conference record. These facts, along with the balance which Michigan possesses, boosted stock of the local team to the point where it appeared almost impossible to beat.

Big Bill Watson, negro sophomore from Saginaw, Mich., paced the Wolverines into the finals by setting a new Big Ten record yesterday in the shotput trials. His toss of 50 feet 10 3/8 inches, which improved by a foot the mark set in 1934 by Chin Kamm of Illinois, will be recognized as official.

Final events will start at 1:45 p. m., EST., with indications that the cinder paths will be lightning fast. A heavy rain last night served only to pack down the track, and coaches believed another record or two will fall if weather conditions remained good.

A battle for top honors may be expected from Indiana, led by its ace distance runner, Don Lash, and from Ohio State and Illinois.

On the basis of yesterday's preliminaries, the Illinois will have ten athletes in the finals and Ohio State will offer nine qualifiers and a sure-fire high jumping team in Mel Walker and Dave Albritton.

The colors of Indiana and Iowa were carried into the finals by seven qualifiers each. And the Hoosiers, who nosed out Michigan in last year's outdoor classic, can depend on Lash, peer of all distance runners in the conference, to bring home the bacon in the mile and two mile. Lash, to prove his bothersome appendix is in good order, entered 880-yard run yesterday and finished fourth in a heat to qualify.

Michigan will be seeking its fifteenth outdoor conference championship. Illinois has won the title 12 times. Others in the Big Ten have had little good fortune in the conference meet. Wisconsin and Chicago have won the crown only three times each. Indiana took it last year for the first time. Iowa, Ohio State, Minnesota, Northwestern and Purdue have never won it.

About This And That In Many Sports

By BILL BRAUCHER

Mack's Club Clicks

NEW YORK, May 22 — It occurs to us that Connie Mack is getting into the American league race this year pretty cheap . . .

he has assembled what appears to be the nucleus at least of another good ball club at bargain prices.

He got Catcher Frank Hayes for the price of a train ticket from New Jersey . . . Earl Brucker, second catcher, came from the Pacific Coast league for $7,500 . . .

Pitcher Luther Thomas cost him $7,500 and two players named Elmer . . . Bill Werber was obtained in a trade for Pinky Higgins, a man Mr. Mack picked off the campus at University of Texas . . .

Pitcher Lynn Nelson was obtained in spring from Memphis in return for two pitchers and two infielders the Tall Tactician never will miss . . . Shortstop Lamar Newsome cost $10,000 . . . First Baseman Chubby Dean and Outfielder Frank Parker were enlisted from the campus at Duke university . . .

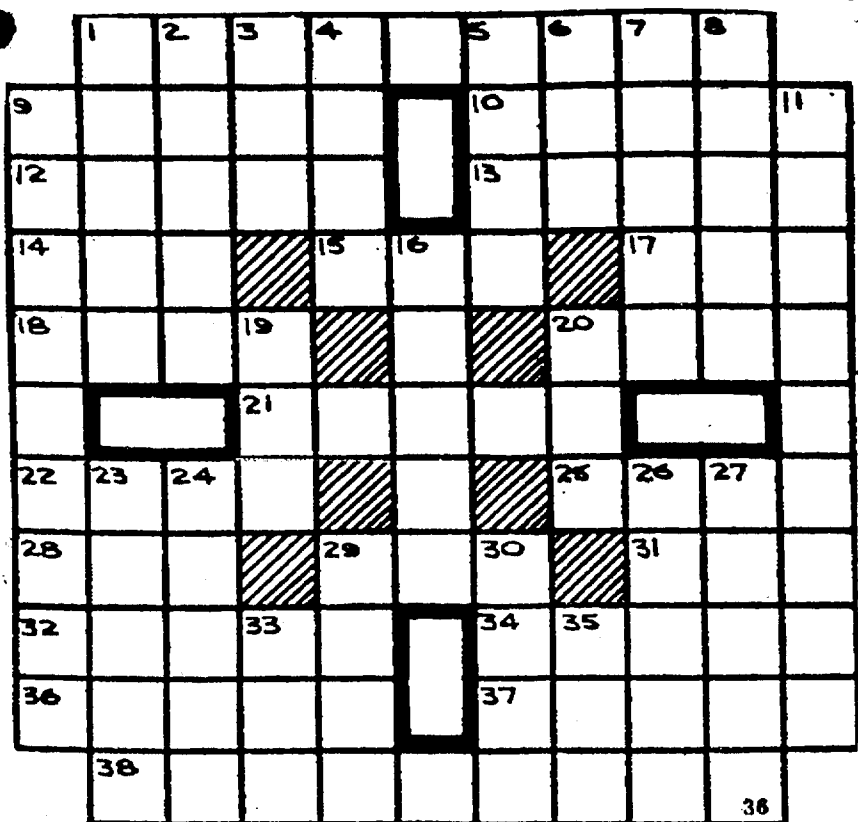

Second Baseman Bill Cissell came in the draft . . . Wally Moses cost $15,000 . . . Mack got Al Williams for two players . . . Lou Finney was purchased from Carrollton, Ga., for $7,500 . . .

Mack has assembled a whole team for less than the $100,000 he paid for Lefty Grove (and he got that $100,000 back, by the way, from Mister Yawkey) . . . so there you are . . .

CONTRACT BRIDGE

IN PROGRESS ORDER

WHEN a suit contract offers an opportunity to use all three of the main ways of taking tricks, it is well to consider that usually their normal order is ruffs first, run the trumps second and use the side suit last for discards. Seldom will there be enough trumps on hand to vary this procedure by dropping the opponents' first and leaving enough for ruffing.

South started the bidding on this deal with 1-Club. North responded with 1-Heart, South 2-Clubs, North 3-Hearts, South 3-No Trumps, North 4-Spades, South 4-No Trumps, North 5-No Trumps and South jumped to 7-Clubs.

Against this contract, the heart K was led and won with the A. The declarer sees that he must get rid of two diamonds and a losing heart. The latter can be parked on the spades, but the diamonds can be eliminated only by ruffing. So the diamond Ace was led, then a small one which was trumped in the dummy. The spade Q was used for an entry to South's hand to lead another diamond. The spade J now enabled declarer to get back into his hand to draw trumps, after which the thirteenth spade in dummy took care of South's losing heart.

Had South attempted to draw trumps, the contract would have been hopeless. He also had to count on the spades being so distributed that he could afford to lead them twice without one of the opponents ruffing.

What bid by South will enable his side to get into the best contract, after East opened with 1-Diamond?

Honeymoon Trailer Built

AMBRIDGE, Pa., (UP) — A home-made trailer will carry Ivan Gradisar and his bride on a honeymoon trip to the West Coast this summer. Gradisar, young mechanical engineering instructor in the University of Pittsburgh, built his de-luxe "honeymoon trailer" in six months at a cost of $500.

CITY MAY SEIZE AUTOS

GREELEY, Col. (UP) — If you can't afford to pay a traffic fine in Greeley you can't afford to drive a car, in the opinion of local justices of the peace. Justices have been authorized to seize cars of traffic law violators who fail to pay fines.

Town Wars on Loose Dogs

CONNEAUT, O. (UP) — Police are conducting a drive against owners who allow dogs to run free in the city as the number of complaints increase. Mrs. M. K. Udell was "knocked down" by two large dogs, and suffered a sprained ankle.

MELROSE, Mass. (UP) — To perk up his health, Fred L. Hatch, at 84, took up horseback riding. Today, at 84, he still is an ardent riding enthusiast. Only last year, he captured five blue ribbons and two trophies as a gentleman rider.

MOST HOME BUYERS HAVE INCOMES OF $2,500 ANNUALLY OR LESS

Need Seen For Lower Home Cost

There is a crying need for the construction of inexpensive, small homes according to A. L. Guckert, director of the Columbus District of the Federal Housing Administration.

"When we consider that most of our population has an annual income of less than $2,000, the necessity for concentrated action to alleviate the situation is of major importance," Director Guckert said.

A recent analysis made of applications for new construction commitments filed with the Federal Housing Administration shows that the average new house built is a two story, frame, consisting of five or six rooms, one bath and a one car detached garage, with a total value of land and buildings of $6,000, which is beyond the reach of the majority group.

Definite steps are being taken by the Federal Housing Administration to provide suitable neighborhood developments for new low cost housing projects, while conferences are being held with contractors and building supply dealers to stimulate group production, thus assuring lower costs per family unit.

Federal Housing loans are available to qualified borrowers for construction of new homes, the purchase of existing homes or the refinancing of present mortgages. Applications are made direct to your local financial institution. The money borrowed is local money and repayable locally, the Federal Housing Administration acting solely as an insuring agency.

ENTERTAINING SIMPLE WITH INFORMAL ROOM

An informal living room or playroom for the adults or young people in the family adds much to the pleasure of living and greatly decreases the care of housekeeping. It simplifies entertaining, encourages pleasant informal hospitality, restricts recreational activities to a given area, while preserving order and system in the remaining rooms of the house.

WELL-LIGHTED HALLS WELCOME TO GUESTS

Well-lighted halls are essential in the modern home. If there is no direct light in this part of the house, a glass panel may be substituted for wood in the front door. This type of improvement should be kept in mind when buying a home.

Borrower To Pay $30 For Month

WASHINGTON, D. C. May 22—An analysis of the incomes of home buyers who are purchasing houses shows that 53.6 percent of these borrowers have incomes of $2,500 or less annually. One-third have reported incomes of $2,000 or less.

Approximately 80 percent of the borrowers purchase homes costing not more than two and one-half times their reported annual income, according to the analysis. Properties valued at less than twice their annual income are bought by 56 percent of the borrowers.

Sixty percent of the borrowers make monthly mortgage payments of $30 or less, and a quarter of the total number pay $20 or less a month. These payments include interest, amortization, service charge, and insurance premiums. For over one-half of the borrowers these monthly payments represent one-seventh or less of the purchaser's income. For 90 percent of the borrowers, mortgage payments represent less than one-fifth of their reported income.

Buyers whose incomes range from $2,001 to $2,500 annually represent 21.7 percent of the total number of borrowers. The $1,501 to $2,000 class represent 19.9 percent of the total number, and the $2,501 to $3,000 class represents 15.1 percent. Those whose incomes are $1,500 or less represent 12 percent of the total, 1.5 percent receiving $1,000 per year or less. Those with incomes of over $3,000 constitute 31.3 percent of all borrowers, 13.9 percent receiving $3,001 to $4,000, 7.3 percent $4,001 to $5,000, 4.1 percent $5,001 to $6,000, 4.4 percent $6,001 to $10,000, and 1.6 percent over $10,000.

SMALL WINDOW PROBLEM IS SOLVED BY MIRRORS

Small windows were a great favorite in houses built during an earlier period. They were frequently placed at either side of a fireplace, over bookcases. Many of these houses are of sound construction and have large, airy rooms.

If the curtaining of the various sized windows in these houses presents a problem to the new owner, a suggestion employed in a Jersey home may be of some value. Mirror glass was fitted over the little windows over the bookcases, and the result was a mirrored niche.

HOT WATER EQUIPMENT FOR USE IN HOUSEHOLD

A recent development in domestic hot-water heating equipment provides for the installation of a hot-water coil in a common oil, coal, or gas-fired warm-air convection heater. The hot water generated by this coil may be used for supplying domestic hot water for the household or to furnish hot-water radiator heat in one or more rooms distant from the convection heater. This arrangement is inexpensive and is particularly adaptable to very small homes in mild climates.

Six-Room Home

THIS house, which deviates from the more usual style of architecture found throughout this country, has three bedrooms, a large living room, dining room, and breakfast room as well. This kitchen is large and there is a commodious pantry. While the dwelling is designed for one floor, attic space could be finished at a later date, if desired. The Federal Housing Administration insured a $4,000 mortgage on the property, which is located at Fresno, Calif. The house is appraised at $5,000, and monthly payments of $41.13 will amortize the debt, and include payments on taxes, insurance, and service charges, in 19 1/2 years.

Questions and Answers

Q. I want to lay a wooden floor over concrete in my basement. Could it be insulated before laying the finish floor?

A. If there is sufficient head room to allow it, the most satisfactory method of laying a wood floor over a concrete basement floor is to lay sleepers over the concrete and nail the finish floor to them. The concrete should be mopped with a heavy coating of hot pitch to prevent the penetration of moisture, and the sleepers should be set on this. If possible, use 2 by 4 sleepers set on edge, and to prevent their warping after laying it would be well to use sound second-hand stock. Green stock may warp and cause a give to the floor in places that may be annoying. It should not be necessary to use any insulation, but if you want to be sure of protection you could lay a dampproof insulation board over the sleepers and nail the finish floor over that. If you use this latter method, some ventilation of the spaces between the sleepers should be provided. Without the insulation board enough air will seep through the cracks in the floor. If head room will not permit this method, it will be necessary to lay the flooring on the concrete. If the concrete floor is absolutely dry at all times, the wood flooring may be laid in mastic without other treatment. However, if there is any evidence of dampness, the floor should first be treated with a metallic waterproofing with a coating of rich cement mortar.

The roof, being the most exposed part of a building, should receive close scrutiny. Leaks menace plaster and paint in rooms and halls below. Water-soaked ceilings become dangerous to occupants and may cause serious damage to the property. Assurance of a water-tight roof is necessary to the owner of a new or modernized home.

Need For Good Lumber Urged In Construction Of Homes

The lumber that goes into the frame of a house will determine largely the future durability of the house itself. Undried lumber of inferior grades is sure to shrink and probably warp during the slow drying process that will take place over a long period. This shrinkage and warpage will affect all the rest of the house; plaster will crack, doors and windows will stick, trim joints will open, plumbing and heating pipes will be forced out of line, forming pockets which will prevent complete drainage in water pipes and steam traps in steam pipes with a consequent hammering in the pipes and blocking of circulation so that some radiators will not heat. This can be avoided largely by the use of grade-marked lumber. But grade marking is just a safe-guard against material inferior to that specified. In each case the grade of the lumber to be used should be specifically noted. Grade marking does not guarantee moisture content, however, as that is an element which can be upset by exposing the lumber during a long period of rain. Lumber should have not over 19 per cent moisture content when erected, and should be protected while on the job during rains, with tarpaulins or waterproof paper.

Except in unusually dry weather, lumber that has been well dried before coming on the job will pick up some moisture even with the best of care, but if it is well dried to start with, and is not subjected to actual soaking, it will dry out rather quickly and will not change in volume enough to make an appreciable difference.

Points Discussed For Checking Bathrooms

Adequate bathroom facilities add as much to the comfort of a home as any one feature. It is one of the considerations especially checked when a home is being inspected for financing under the terms of the Insured Mortgage System of the Federal Housing Administration.

When a house is put up for resale the bathroom should be in good condition. The following check list emphasizes points that show the adequacy and convenience of the bath:

1. If a bath serves more than one bedroom, is it readily accessible from each room without having to pass through the other?
2. If the room is too small, could a change in the location of fixtures increase free space?
3. If the space is large, would a dressing alcove add to convenience?
4. Are there un concealed pipes on wall or ceiling which are unsightly?
5. Is there a minimum amount of dust-catching equipment?
6. Is the room properly ventilated?
7. Is the flooring in good condition and is it waterproof?
8. Are the walls waterproof and easy to clean?
9. Are fixtures in good repair?
10. Is the room properly heated and radiators and pipes located to avoid accidental burns?
11. Is the water supply adequate and the hot water instantaneous?
12. Is drainage system free from clogging?
